Trade delegation heading to Cuba

A seven-person North Dakota trade delegation led by Agriculture Commissioner Doug Goehring leaves tomorrow for Havana, Cuba.

"We will discuss with officials from Alimport, Cuba's central food purchasing agency, the export of North Dakota commodities, especially dry edible beans, peas, wheat and distillers grains to Cuba," Goehring said. "The Cubans are also showing interest in improving their beef herds by obtaining North Dakota genetics."

In addition to Goehring, delegation includes Randy Schneider, president of the North Dakota Ethanol Producers Association; Alan Juliuson and Todd Sorenson, directors of the Northharvest Bean Growers Association; Ken Bertsch, state seed commissioner, and two North Dakota Department of Agriculture staff members, Stephanie Sinner, a marketing specialist, and Dave Nelson, state entomologist.

The delegation expects to meet with officials from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Cuban Chamber of Commerce, the Department of Plant Health and the Cuban Veterinary Institute.

This is the eighth Cuban trade mission organized by NDDA. Past exports to Cuba have included dry beans, pasta, dry peas, semolina and wheat.

The trade delegation returns Nov. 24 to Bismarck.

Wind providing more percent of total power

South Dakota is a national leader in wind power, according to a recent study.

Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratories, funded by the U.S. Department of Energy, has released its 2009 edition of the Wind Technologies Market Report. It shows North Dakota, along with South Dakota, Iowa and Minnesota, as states where wind is becoming a bigger player in terms of electricity generation, says Mark Bolinger, research scientist at Berkeley.

"The amount of wind installed in each of those states at the end of 2009 was sufficient to provide more than 10 percent of the electricity that's generated by all sources within those states," Bolinger says.

Bolinger says there's also been an effect on renewable portfolio standards, the amount of renewable energy utilities have to use as part of their power supply mix. "If their overall sales decline - for example, during a poor economy - then the amount of renewables they have to provide will also go down."

Bolinger says longer-term projections for the study indicate growth for

November 12, 2010

On September 29, 2009, Certificate of Site Compatibility for Energy Conversion Facility No. 15 was issued to Minnesota Power, an operating division of Allete, Inc., (Allete) authorizing construction of a 75.9 MW Bison 1 Wind Project consisting of up to thirty three 2.3 MW wind turbine generators and associated facilities to be constructed in two phases in Morton and Oliver Counties of North Dakota. On November 8, 2010, Allete filed a request to modify the Certificate to move one wind turbine generator approximately 215 feet; and for authority to utilize Siemens direct drive turbine technology with 3.0 MW wind turbine generators and a resulting increase in overall total generating capacity to 81.8 MW and a decrease by two in the total number of turbines to 31.

The issues to be considered in this matter are:

1. Will the location, construction, and operation of the modified facilities produce minimal adverse effects on the environment and upon the welfare of the citizens of North Dakota?
2. Are the modified facilities compatible
